Plain English explanation

The CCG keeps identifiable and clinical data on you relating to Risk Stratification to support your GP in assessing the provision and use of services where you have applied for these services.

This data is used to assess whether you meet the criteria for funding for these services and to enable provision of services thereafter.

People who have access to your information will only normally have access to that which they need to fulfil their roles.

We are required by Articles in the General Data Protection Regulations to provide you with the information in the following 9 subsections.

2) Data Protection Officer contact details	Email: nelcsu.dpo@nhs.net Phone: 03000 428438
3) Purpose of the processing	Risk stratification Your GP uses your data to provide the best care they can for you. As part of this process, your GP will use your personal and health data to undertake risk stratification, also known as case finding. Risk stratification involves applying computer based algorithms, or calculations, to identify those patients registered with the GP Surgery who are most at risk from certain medical conditions and who will benefit from clinical care to help prevent or better treat their condition. To identify those patients individually from the patient community registered with your GP would be a lengthy and time-consuming process, which would by its nature potentially not identify individuals quickly and increase the time to improve care. Your GP Surgery uses the services of a health partner, NHS NEL Commissioning Support Unit (NEL) to identify those most in need of preventative or improved care. This contract is arranged by us. Neither we nor NHS NEL will at any time have access to your personal or confidential data. They act on behalf of your GP to organise this service with appropriate contractual and security measures only. NEL will automatically process your personal and confidential data without any staff being able to view the data. Typically they will process your data using indicators such as your age, gender, NHS

* “Common Law Duty of Confidentiality”, common law is not written out in one document like an Act of Parliament. It is a form of law based on previous court cases decided by judges; hence, it is also referred to as 'judge-made' or case law. The law is applied by reference to those previous cases, so common law is also said to be based on precedent.

The general position is that if information is given in circumstances where it is expected that a duty of confidence applies, that information cannot normally be disclosed without the information provider's consent.

In practice, this means that all patient information, whether held on paper, computer, visually or audio recorded, or held in the memory of the professional, must not normally be disclosed without the consent of the patient. It is irrelevant how old the patient is or what the state of their mental health is; the duty still applies.

Three circumstances making disclosure of confidential information lawful are:

- where the individual to whom the information relates has consented;
- where disclosure is in the public interest; and
- where there is a legal duty to do so, for example a court order.
